 - Election on a Congressional district basis
 - Impact of this change:

Key points discussed included:

Preschool funding: There was discussion about changing how preschool slots are allocated to provide more flexibility, rather than tying funding to specific ages (3 vs 4 year olds).

1% sales tax for school construction: This policy came close to passing last year but was vetoed by the governor. There's interest in reintroducing it this year, though bill limits may affect its priority.

Student well-being: Increased funding for substance abuse and mental health counseling was discussed. The legislators acknowledged the importance but noted funding challenges.

Gun safety measures: Several gun safety bills were introduced last year but most were vetoed. There may be renewed efforts this year on issues like safe storage and background checks.

English language learner assessments: Concerns were raised about how ELL students are assessed and how that impacts school accreditation.

State Board of Education appointments: There was discussion about changing how members are selected to ensure more education experience.

Sustainability and solar energy: Interest in more support for schools to implement solar and other sustainability initiatives. Challenges with Dominion Energy were noted.

Math education: A new "math numeracy act" was mentioned as a potential focus for the upcoming legislative session.

UVA payments in lieu of taxes: There was brief discussion of the idea of UVA making payments to support local schools and housing, though constitutional issues were noted.

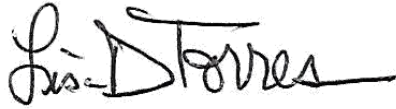

The legislators encouraged continued communication from the school board on key issues and expressed appreciation for the organized presentation of priorities. They also noted the constraints of the 15-bill limit for the upcoming session and the need to prioritize legislation that has a chance of passing and being signed into law.

5.1 Comments from Members of the Community: There were none.

6.1 Adjourn: The meeting adjourned at 5:58 p.m.
