The division sponsored a CCS Job Fair in February extending early intents to 15 applicants and has worked closely with education schools to place and extend early intents to student-teachers. 4. PRIORITIZING FUNDS: Describe how the school division will prioritize funds to schools that are implementing comprehensive support and improvement activities and targeted support and improvement activities under section 1111(d) and have the highest percentage of children counted under section 1124(c). If there are no schools identified as comprehensive or targeted support schools, how does the division prioritize funding? (Section 2103(b)(2)(C)) Hiring highly qualified teachers is a priority for Charlottesville City Schools (CCS); therefore, a great deal of time and effort is put into annual recruitment and retention. Annual recruitment includes visits to local colleges and universities with the integration of historically black colleges and universities. Teams of division leaders, school administrators, and teachers work collaboratively at scheduled recruitment events. Secondly, CCS works closely with education programs in the placement of student-teachers and interns resulting a large conglomerate of student-teacher hires. Lastly, funds are used for professional learning and licensure application/renewals.

| Retention of licensed and properly endorse staff is key. CCS organizes and designs professional learning that equips teachers with best practices, methods, and strategies that translate into successful teaching and learning. Professional learning includes focus areas such as resilience, responsive inquiry, differentiation, changing the narrative, and supporting ELL/special education classrooms. The division offers annually a Number and Number Sence course to all newly hired teachers and recommends all staff participate in LETRS (Langage Essentials for Teachers of Reading and Spelling). Special Education teachers also participate in TEACCH Autism program. |

| A partnership with Longwood University is providing teachers a pathway to administration with the support to earn an educational leadership endorsement. A partnership with PVCC and JMU is providing instructional assistants a pathway to become a teacher. A partnership with the University of Virginia will place a program liaison at Buford Middle School and provide extensive science investigation and engineering foundational professional learning and practical application to the entire cohort of 7th & 8th-grade science teachers.  |

Charlottesville City Schools are recognized for their commitment to parent and community involvement. Regular community forums, including surveys and principal meet-and-greets, are provided to encourage parents and other citizens to participate in charting the course for the school division. A range of groups exist where school staff and community members collaborate, such as the School Health Advisory Board; the Title I Parent Advisory Committee; the Special Education Advisory Committee, the Gifted Advisory Committee, City of Promise, Ready Kids, Black Male Alliance, the International Rescue Committee, the UVA International Family Medicine Clinic, the Charlottesville/Albemarle Trauma Informed Community Network, the Charlottesville Tiered Systems of Support Mental Wellness Action Team, the CCS Equity Committee, and the Charlottesville Refugee Dialogue Committee.

The division also partners with the University of Virginia (UVA) to provide resources within the division for teachers. UVA engineering staff and students collaborate with teachers on elementary engineering curriculum development. UVA has provided STEM training for our teachers, and reading instruction for all levels of teachers, and the Special Education Department at UVA collaborates with staff to provide resources within the division for teachers, and the Special Education Department at UVA collaborates with staff to provide fractions for all levels of teachers, and development to training for teachers of students with dissibilities. UVA is supporting a cohort of teachers in completing the requirements for an add-on endorsement in gifted education. In addition, UVA school counseling faculty have collaborated and consulted with CCS on professional learning and program development. The Virginia Partnership for School Mental Health is a collaboration between the VDOE, UVA, and a number of local school divisions including Charlottesville where CCS school mental health professionals receive professional learning and clinical consultation. Charlottesville teachers mentor UVA students who tutor ESL students during the school year and volunteer at the ESL summer program for emergent bilingual students. CCS also partners with the University of Virginia in the Compassionate School Project, an elementary SEL/Mindfulness/physical education program.
